Rambling Thoughts.

BY "NEMO."

(Copyrighted.)
[These "Thoughts," by a layman, are read in five hundred thousand homes, scattered in every State in the Union. In this county they will be found week by week in the columns of this paper only, as we have made arrangements with the author for their exclusive publication.]

SOME CHRISTMAS THOUGHTS.

And what is he to us, we anxious, burmay discover in him, to this soul he seems to be "just one of us." We believe that his temptations were not mere theatric displays, that his suffering was not feigued. We know what agony is not less did he; in our cases we can too often trace it back to a breach of law, but not so could he, and thus the greater poignancy in his sufferings. We do not lower him by thus thinking of him, but we raise ourselves to a higher, nobler humanity. Surely that was the work he came to do! Because he was a man, manhood is glorious; because he triumphed over evil, manhood is helped to trample temptation under foot; because he remained pure and and undefiled, there is ever just before us an examplar to copy. We discover him to be no splitter of theological hairs; no creater and enforcer of a set belief saye in God, the father of all, from which cause we are His sons, and brothers to Jesus. "Decus, not creeds; deeds are creeds," his forward ery. 'Tis creed enough to see in him a career to imitate. 'Creeds first, deeds afterwards," the opposing words of those who, by their human folly, would have darkened the light that rose in the human heart from his career.

Through him we see that those who never understand their grandeur, whose hearts never throb with noble purpose, whose powers never rejoice to run the race of life, are those who look outward from within perpetually, as though the universe circled for them alone. To such, wrapped up in self, whose souls needs must be saved though all others perish, willing to take but unwilling to give, dead though appearing to live; to all such his life gives rebuke. From him we learn a truth that the great world around is last grasping; that he who gives most gets most; he is filled with good things and crowned with glory and honor imperishable, who scattereth all of good that he has, that his soul is best saved whose soul is self-reckoned as naught if he can but save others. To breath such an atmosphere of spirit after groveling in agony as some of us do, afraid to live and yet more afraid to die, is to move from the air of the dungeon into the ecstacy of the mountain top. Life lived in shoes soled for 35 and 40 cents. We his way has infinite width to it; it is its have a nice assorted stock of fall and own great reward, yet other rewards there be. It husbes the clamoring pas- packs, which we will dispose of at very sions, it gives a man world-citizenship; it enableshim to seek a kinsman in every fellow; it thrills him even in obscurity with a sense of brotherhood to all the great Gartner's store.

souls of all the ages; it guides the hand upward into the Divine, and the narrow, darkened way broadens into a golden, shimmering spread of light up which to travel to the real center of things.

Whether avowedly or not matters little, it is his spirit that thrills the closing years of our century. Against the fatalism and the materialism of Mobammed, against the selfishness and pessimism of the Hindoo anxious to escape away into unconsciousness against the slavish worship of the past by the Confucians, we see a verile, aggressive, hopeful force at work in every nation that basfallen under the influence of Jesus. Hide-bound Judaism never emancipated the human mind, as his influence has done. The growing thoughtfulness of man for man is his work; the spirit of Jesus is abroad to bring us all together in one as human beings with mutual obligations. He it is who makes us feel a kinship to the fallen woman and the fallen man; to the agonized and the children; for are they not all bearing the image of humanity, which he, the great unselfish one, the friend of sinners, also bore?

Yet some of us are groping onward as if in a night-black passage. We glance bewildered at the events, the dangers, the pleasures of life, and then pass away forever without understanding our relation to it and our fellows. I can imagine the All-Father mourning over such wasted force, such profitless existence, when the key of life is already within the world and within our reach:-

"Emmanuel; God with us!"

Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are perderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While was pastor of the Paptist church at Rives Junction, she was brought down with pneumonia, succeeding lagrappe, Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption, and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at D. T. Macdonald's drug stores.
